

ANOTHER QUEEN APPEAL BITES THE DUST

On Tuesday, the National Labor Relations Board tossed aside management's last ditch attempt to overturn our clear mandate to form a union.

The board denied the Queen's request because the hospital's final appeal "raises no substantial issues warranting review."

That means Queen is out of appeals — and our vote to form a union stands.

"Management's desperate attempts to undo our election is a reminder that we still have a fight on our hands to make this hospital a better place for workers and patients. It's time for management to stop delaying and start negotiating a contract."

Good contracts start with strong, well-informed union members.
